

Personal Loans to buy infrared Heating

After a Teams Meeting with a major UK Bank, it appears quite possible that Personal Loans will be available for people to buy our brilliant infrared heating, enabling them to move away from gas and massively reduce their heating bills.

The Bank concerned want to complete their own research and then have another Meeting to discuss the mechanics of setting up a special Personal Loan Scheme.

It is a great shame that the Government is not doing the same, instead of wasting £5,000 each time on the Boiler Upgrade System (BUS). There is absolutely no point in doing that as now consumers have to find another £5,000 to £10,000 of their own money. If they have that sort of money to buy an air source heat pump while they are paying in excess to heat their homes.

Probably a year ago I did put my idea of a Personal Loan Scheme to Government, long before the energy prices started to go through the roof. I suggested that they set up an Agency similar to Companies House, whereby they loaned consumers the £2000 or so required over a 24-month period to equip their property with our brilliant infrared heating. The idea fell on deaf ears while those ears were stuck in the sand.

It is good to see that at least the commercial market is aware that something has to happen to help people survive the next Winter and not freeze to death.
